Berlin, July 25—Amazing disclosures of a revolutionary plot against the government of President Gomez, of Venezuela, which might have menaced the Monroe doctrine if successful, were made here today by a German sea captain, Erich Hirschfeld.

Hirschfeld also declared that negotiations had been opened with Germany to get arms and intimating that similar negotiations had been broached at Rome. Hirschfeld, finding that he was being "double-crossed" financially, revealed that plot to President Gomez and the plans fell through.

Hirschfeld implicated Dr. Xortega Martinez, former foreign minister of Venezuela; General Alcantara, former minister of interior and another former Venezuelan who is now a citizen of Holland and a tanker. Following the exposure Alcantara was arrested on board a ship that had been purchased to carry arms and ammunition from Europe to South America.

Following the revolutionary revelations Martinez accused Hirschfeld of having been a German spy in the U. S. during the war. Hirschfeld vigorously denied this accusation.

Hirschfeld is a seaman and formerly commanded a ship. He did not explain how he originally became affiliated with the plotters. His story as told to the International News Service, follows:

"Martinez and Alcantara commissioned me to buy 10,000 rifles, 8,000,000 cartridges, 20 to 30 machine guns, four field pieces of artillery, two airplanes with bombs and one rapid 1,000 ton steamer for the transportation of troops. They wanted a suitable 'warship' on which at least two six inch guns and machine guns could be mounted.

"The revolution was scheduled to take place this present summer. Bases were to be established in Porto Rico and at Curacao. The ship would go to Amsterdam and secure dutch papers and then, flying the Dutch flag, would proceed to the Canary Islands to take on board Austrian arms and ammunition bought in Italy.

"The ship was then to go to waters near Curacao and take on board soldiers sent from Curacao in schooners.

"A fake mutiny was to be staged on board the ship near Curacao as an excuse for putting off the Dutch captain and crew. The vessel was then to proceed to Carupano on the northern coast of Venezuela and hoist the Venezuelan flag.

"The rebel troops were to be landed at Carupano, occupying the banks and public buildings. This was to be the sign for the revolt. In the meantime other troops were to have been concentrated on the Colombian border to co-operate.

Martinez planned to depose President Gomez and assume the presidency himself. Alcantara was to be minister of war.

"A banker named Bendelal, of 22 Rue Richer, Paris, a former citizen of Venezuela but now a citizen of Holland, made a special trip of investigation to Venezuela before deciding to finance the revolution. He was promised valuable concessions for the money expended.

"Bendelal bought the Finnish ship Odis from the Kline concern at Kiel for 5,000,000 marks, part of this money covering repairs. The Odis was painted a 'war gray' and a torpedo tube and a searchlight were mounted upon her.

"Alcantara had made an effort to buy German arms left in Holland by German troops interned during the war. He offered 2,000,000 marks for them to a German named Rosenfeld who claimed to represent the German government. Rosenfeld demanded from 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 marks. Alcantara then offered oil concessions to Germany but during the negotiations the Spa agreement was reached between Germany and the allies and this made it impossible to sell the German weapons.

"Alcantara told me that the Venezuelan minister at Rome, Dr. Danino, who had connections with Italian officials, could secure arms. It was declared that actual arrangements were entered into to buy Austrian arms from Italy similar to the offer made to Germany. The revolutionaries offered to repay five times the (Continued on Page 4, Col. 2.)

De Valera At Cabinet Meeting of Sinn Fein

DUBLIN, July 25—Eamonn De Valera today attended a full meeting of the Sinn Fein Cabinet to consider Premier Lloyd George's peace offer to Ireland. Among those present was Countess Markiewicz who was released from Mount Joy prison on Monday.

Relations between the Irish Republican Army and the British crown forces are becoming strained.

The Republicans allege that the members of the crown forces are violating many points of the truce.

It was reported that the commander of the Irish Republican forces in the Cork district became so incensed over alleged violations of the armistice that he asked General Headquarters in Dublin for permission to resume hostilities against the English, but this was refused.

Negotiations are under way between the headquarters of the Irish Republican Army and the British military forces and it is believed that an amicable settlement will be reached before night.

Townfolk Stand In Reverence As Bodies of Soldier Heroes Pass By

Military Funerals of Robert Bracken and Richard Puchino
Held Yesterday Bring Crowds To Church, Homes and Cemeteries, and To Wayside As Corteges Go By.

AMERICAN LEGION DOES HONOR TO BOTH ALIKE ITALIAN POPULACE TURNS OUT STRONG

Bristol citizens turned out enmasse yesterday to show their esteem for and to revere the memory of Robert W. Bracken, one of the borough's soldier dead. Bracken's body was buried with military honors by the American Legion post which bears his name.

Persons from every walk of life in Bristol visited the Bracken home yesterday, stood along the streets as the cortege passed, grouped themselves about the grave, and expressed their feeling in floral tokens of regard. It was a touching testimonial of a town's people to a soldier boy whom most of them had known in life.

Services were held at the Bracken home 531 Linden street. Rev. Henry M. Hartmann, pastor of Presbyterian Church, spoke briefly yet with deep feeling, of the lad who had fearlessly laid down his life at his country's call.

Previous to the services many friends of the departed soldier visited his late residence and gazed upon the closed coffin with reverence. Banked about the coffin were floral tokens estimated in value at a sum approximating $400. Designs such as large broken circles mounted on stands, wreaths, American flags, shields, emblems of organizations of which the deceased was a member and a huge basket of flowers purchased with the contributions of neighbors who had watched "Bob" Bracken grow from childhood and felt his loss as their own.

Members of the Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, carried the flag draped coffin from the house and placed it on a caisson drawn by four white horses. The 18th Infantry Band, from Camp Dix, played the funeral dirge and the cortege began its slow military march to the cemetery. As the caisson wended its way through the streets, many residents walked beside it. Flags flew at half-staff throughout the town and men doffed their hats as the caisson passed by. Solemnity marked the occasion from beginning to end. Silence reigned, the military step of the marching men and the muffled beat of the drum alone rending the pall of silence.

About the grave crowds of people grouped themselves behind ropes stretched to reserve a sufficient space for the family and the Legion.

The Rev. Hartmann continued the Presbyterian burial service at the grave. Commander Franklin Glikson, of Bracken Post, delivered a stirring and patriotic eulogy and Chaplain Frank Weik made the prayer.

Members of Enterprise Fire Co., No. 5; Washington Camp, No. 789, P. O. S. of A., and the Young Men's Association attended the services.

Among those present was Ernest Minott who stood beside Bracken when he dropped at St. Mihiel. Minott is an Italian, residing in Trenton, and was in the same company with Bracken. When efforts were being made in 1918 and 1919 to get some trace of the dead hero, whose whereabouts at that time were a mystery, L. T. Rodan learned of Minott and got from him the story of Bracken's death.

When the body arrived in Bristol on Thursday Minott was notified and he came to Bristol yesterday to pay honor and tribute to one whose acquaintance with him was brief but which had been welded with unbreakable strength during the life and death struggle on the field of battle.

Three veterans of the Civil War, as representatives of H. Clay Beatty Post, No. 73, G. A. R., prompted by the strong ties of fellow defenders of liberty and justice attended the funeral of Bracken. The gray haired veterans who heeded the call of 61 were Michael Dougherty, Charles E. Scott, and William Phillips.

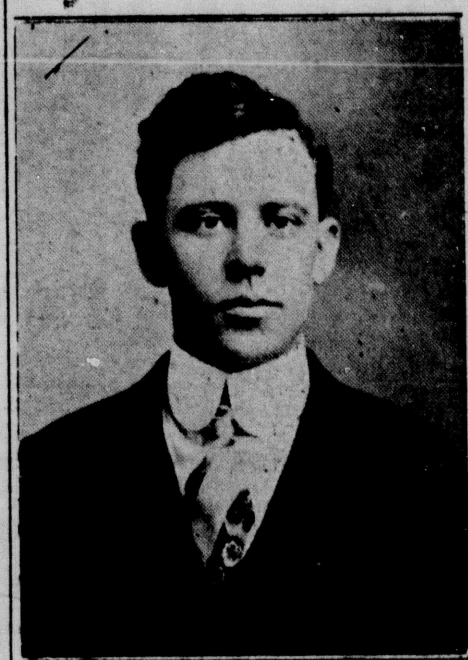

"It is not customary for us to attend these funerals," said one of the trio, "but we wanted to show our friendship for a fellow soldier."

Firemen Entertained As Reward For Quenching Blaze

Bristol firemen were guests Saturday evening of the Cornwells fire department and entertained in P. O. S. of A. hall. The visitors were given a supper and entertained with orchestra selections and dancing throughout the evening. The affair was attended by the officers of the Bucks County Firemen's Association.

The event was in the nature of an appreciation of the efforts of the fire fighters who several weeks ago fought desperately to halt a big blaze on the estate of Mother Catherine Drexel at Cornwells. The Bristol fire and also other companies of adjacent towns were summoned to the aid of the Cornwells department and checked the flames.

Mother Catherine Drexel highly appreciative of the work of the firemen donated a sum of money to the Cornwells department to finance the entertainment of the men who had aided them at the blaze.

Hydroplane and Speedboat Have Near Collision

Crowds at River Fete Hold
Breath at Narrow Escape

PILOT IS COMMENDED

Sport Programme at Anchor
Yacht Club's Beach
Party Interesting

The crowds watching the water sports incident to the river fete of the Anchor Yacht Club on Saturday got a real thrill when, by a very narrow margin, "333", the hydroplane owned by Frank Mills, of Essington, escaped colliding with the "Freda II", Billy Freitag's speedboat. The presence of mind of Mills in averting a crash that would no doubt have cost lives brought a gasp of commendation from the eye witnesses.

Mills was giving exhibition flights, on which he took passengers. On the trip in question he had as his passenger L. C. Spring, of Radcliffe street. He started from shore and when he reached the channel, was skimming over the surface, preparatory to ascending. Just at that moment the Freda II sped around the corner of the wet dock of the Merchants' Shipyard.

Seeing what was before him, Mills, with rare presence of mind, stalled his engine. As it was, the momentum of boats was sufficient to cause them to escape colliding by only a hair's breadth. The crowds heaved a deep sigh of relief as the motor boat cut the water past the bow of the hydroplane and that craft, in a moment soared up into the air unharmed.

With all sorts of river sports including swimming, speed boat racing, canoeing, hydroplaning and aquaplaning, the beach party proved a source of attraction for hundreds from this section. Those who were not gathered on the club house lawn lined the river banks both up and down the stream.

Competition was keen in all of the contests. The winners were as follows:

Event 1—Canoe race, straight away, double: First Hamilton and Davis, Lakanoo, Burlington, N. J.; second Stockton and Cauket, Lakanoo, Burlington, N. J.; third Ratcliffe and Edwards, Y. M. A., Bristol; fourth Abbott and Mensel, Bristol; fifth Bruden and Jas. Fine, Bristol. The prize was a canoe set and back rest.

Event 2—Canoe race, straight away, in and out, First Hamilton and McGinnis, Lakanoo, Burlington, N. J.; second Abbott and Mensel, Bristol; third Fine and Bruden, Bristol. The prize was a set of paddles.

Event 3—Mixed doubles, First—Harrison and Fine, Bristol; second Davis and Baker, Lakanoo, Burlington, N. J.; third Fine and Bruden. The prize was a canoe light.

Event 4—Swimming race, 50 yards. Ralph Bruden, first; Ellis Ratcliffe, second; James Fine, third; Joseph Torphy, Harriman fourth. All three of the first to finish are Bristol boys. The prize was a bathing suit.

Event 5—Swimming at 50 yards for girls. Mary Fine, first; Alice Yates, second; Jessie Fine, third; Dorothy Melvaine fourth; Muriel Fine, fifth. All contestants are Bristolians and all gave a fine exhibition of swimming and endurance. They finished the course amid the applause of the spectators. The prize was a bathing suit.

The judges of the above events were Owen F. Evans, Dr. Edward J. Laing, William Terneson and Serrill D. Detlefson.

The events were adjudged in mid-stream, the judges being aboard the boat of Commodore George W. Buckley.

Billy Freitag's new speedboat, Freda II, the flying pennant of the Westville Power Boat Association, won the trophy of its owner—the Freitag trophy—in the contest for speed boats. Timers and judges were members of the Delaware River Yacht Racing Association, under whose rules the race was run. They were aboard the Pickaninny.

The victory of the Freda II brings to the forefront of the yachting world a new displacement racer. The craft celebrated its entry into the racing game with a spectacular triumph Saturday. A new wheel which was just installed during the last week more (Continued on Page 4, Col. 1.)

THE MARTIAL NOTE WILL SOUND

Without any other solicitation than that made through the columns of the Courier, the patriotic and tender-hearted citizens of Bristol have hastened to insure the fullest military honors for the bodies of soldiers who died overseas. Robert W. Bracken Post has received, since it made the explanation of why it was not able to accord to the body of Joseph Schumacher honors similar to those it had previously accorded returned bodies, sufficient contributions to insure the attendance of the military band on several funeral occasions to come.

The thought that any of the Bristol boys who made the supreme sacrifice should be denied, through mere lack of funds to defray expenses, honors which had been accorded others of their comrades, apparently touched the hearts of Bristol people. The patriotic pride of Bristolians must also have been appealed to.

Suffice it to say that not only was there a sufficient sum in the hands of Bracken post to defray the expense of bringing the soldier band from Camp Dix to attend both funerals yesterday, but the Post has enough remaining to bring the band here for several future soldier funerals, to be held when more bodies arrive.

Particularly touching was the response of the father of Joseph Schumacher. He, voluntarily and promptly, after reading Bracken Post's explanation in the Courier of why his son was not given the fullest military honors, made a generous contribution to the fund. It was apparently in Mr. Schumacher's mind that, because the Post had been unable to fully honor his own boy, it should not be prevented from honoring other boys whose bodies were brought home for interment in their homeland.

Bracken Post no doubt feels very deeply that the response to its statement of the facts came so opportunely as the occasion of the burial of its titular hero, Robert W. Bracken, whose funeral was one of those held yesterday.

The Legion veterans would unquestionably have been sorely grieved had they been compelled to bury the soldier for whom they have named their post without the martial note that should accompany every soldier to his resting place.

The Courier feels gratified that it was thus able, by laying the facts before the people of Bristol, to assist the American Legion in so commendable a purpose.

There are seven or eight more bodies to return, and the amount now in hand will not, of course, be sufficient to cover all of these funerals. The fund will therefore remain open for further contributions, and it is to be hoped that patriotic Bristol people who have not contributed will send in their remittances.

A LESSON TO BUSINESS MEN

Henry Ford's success in releasing his automobile company from its financial embarrassments aggregating $58,000,000 by quickly raising $87,300,000 in regular business transactions is of the greatest interest and value as a demonstration of the right way to conduct business.

Defying and overcoming the unfriendly influence and maneuvers of certain Wall Street potentialities was a rare and praiseworthy example of courage and self-confidence, and it conveys an impressive suggestion to manufacturers and merchants who prefer to control their own affairs, rather than be subject to outside domination or interference.

When a period of reaction sets in, prices are sure to fall and to be succeeded by declines in costs. The prices which prevail when a depression begins are the highest prices obtainable, and all subsequent prices are steadily reduced. The deflation is progressive. Business men are not so familiar with this principle as are brokers, who are well aware, from experience, that the policy in a bear market is to sell stocks and securities as soon as the downward tendency is apparent.

Mr. Ford applied this principle. He liquidated his business. He took his losses immediately and in full. He did not attempt to do the impossible thing and endeavor to equalize his losses. Stock worth $105,000,000 he sold for $88,000,000, the loss being $17,000,000, or practically seventeen per cent. He converted his stock, whose value was sure to diminish in the severe reaction, into cash. And the readjustment established his industry on virtually a normalized basis and eased him of his financial tension.

The other demonstration of general practical value was his resistance to the importunities of Eastern bankers or brokers. Had he permitted the financiers to furnish his company the funds required to relieve the temporary distress, his industry no longer would have been wholly his own. The bankers naturally would demand a voice in determining the company's policy and in regulating the management. And it might be only a question of time when Mr. Ford would own less than 51 per cent. of the company's stock.

Manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers who have delayed their liquidation, imagining that they might be able to equalize their losses, should be governed by Mr. Ford's example. A business is stronger and safer if it is readjusted to new conditions.

SIFTING IMMIGRATION

The chairman of the immigration committee of the House of Representatives at Washington has introduced a bill providing for examination of intending immigrants to this country at American consulates in foreign ports.

A great deal of the trouble from undesirable immigration has resulted because the force of inspectors who examine the aliens has been wholly inadequate and could give them only a very superficial examination. Millions have been admitted who are not fit to live in this free country.

It seems hard on an alien, after he has toiled and struggled to get his passage money, to turn him back when he reaches our ports. The time to reject him is before he buys his ticket, and before he leaves his home country, where his antecedents can be investigated. This measure providing for examination of immigrants before leaving Europe should do a lot to sift out undesirables.

Four persons crossed the Atlantic ocean, from New York City to Cowes, England, in a 39-foot yacht. The voyage took thirty-three days. It is fortunate the craft did not strike a whale.

"WAIT UNTIL I CAN AFFORD IT, SON"

Our Washington Letter

WASHINGTON, July 25.—In round numbers the federal board for vocational training and rehabilitation of disabled ex-service men have enrolled 108,000 men to date. Harry M. Fidler, member of the board, testifying before the Senate subcommittee in charge of the Sweet bill, states the enrollments are increasing at the rate of 1,500 per month. According to Mr. Fidler, the cost of the work for July will approximate $13,000,000, and the cost for the current fiscal year beginning July 1 will approximate $165,000,000.

There are over 75,000 of these ex-service men who are training with pay, at a maximum monthly cost of $160, paid by the government. There are over 8,000 training without pay, but at a minimum cost to the government for tuition and supplies of $35 a month.

The value of this work is abundantly proved by the records of 4,000 disabled men who have completed their training and are engaged in employment. These men earned an average of $1,051 a year before entering the army. Today, in spite of their physical disabilities, their average annual wage is $1,550.

The work of this board has been the object of bitter denunciation by several members of Congress, particularly Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, a Democratic leader. It should be kept in mind that all of this criticism applies to the board under the Wilson Administration. The board was reorganized by President Harding in the latter part of March and since that time there has been no complaint from ex-service men regarding the treatment they have received at the hands of the board.

An example of how the board is functioning since its reorganization is furnished by its work in Districts 2 and 3, comprising the states of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Delaware. Since June 15, pending cases in these states have been reduced from 12,185 to 3,037, or a reduction of 9,148 cases. Indifference to applications of ex-service men and interminable delay in handling them was one of the chief complaints against the board as it was organized and managed under the Democratic administration.

OBSERVATIONS

The business men who now complain that there is nothing to do may be cursing themselves after the crops are harvested because they can't get goods delivered.

After the business girls get all fixed up for fascinating the men of the office then they are ready to take hold and do a little work.

Being urged to cultivate habits of observation, the young men are giving the girls very careful and minute inspection.

After running an ad for several months without telling the public of any new thing in their store, some merchants complain that advertising doesn't pay.

To Make the Education of the Public School Children More Practical

By MARY KING SHERMAN, General Federation of Women's Clubs

Applied Education, as a General Federation department title, is so new that a definition from our viewpoint is justified and is found in one of the purposes of the department. This purpose is, in brief, to make the education of public school children more practical.

In this 1921 civilization "practical" cannot be comprehensively defined. Nevertheless, "Applied Education" includes certain essentials. It must be real education, of practical value as contrasted with academic teaching by schedule. It must give the pupil facts and training that will be always useful. It must deal with the realities of the environment of the individual. It must make clear the homely truths of everyday life. It must concern itself with the nature and working of the physical world around us. It must give full value to the educational, economic and spiritual worth of nature's methods and processes. And it must be education that results in a tangible, vital force in the consciousness of the individual.

The department is working for open county conferences in every county of every state. The purpose is to bring together the women of each county, to show them their community needs and how they may co-operate through community groups and to point out the ways in which the General Federation of Women's Clubs may be of service. These conferences are devoted to the consideration of the work of the three divisions of the applied education department—education, home economics and conservation of natural resources.

The beneficial effects of these open county conferences, followed by community group co-operation, cannot be overestimated. This program makes the women see for themselves their own home and community needs and shows them how these may be met. It is based upon action instead of theory and actually functions in the lives of women. It stimulates initiative, inspires and develops leadership and increases the sense of individual responsibility to the community. It results in the development of better American citizens.

Home Town Business

"Making Business Friends"

The Third of a Series of Editorials showing why purchases should be made in your home town in preference to buying from Mail Order Houses.

Success in life is regarded by many people as a matter of luck. Others consider that the man who goes ahead must have some very exceptional mentality.

In the majority of cases neither of these conceptions is correct. Fortune is a fickle bird. Those who depend on her are usually upset by some flint of her restless tail. As for superior ability, it very often happens that men of quite ordinary mentality win a big business triumph.

Success comes by degrees and as a result of taking advantage of opportunities. Two men of about equal ability will start even in life. One man will go along in a routine way and never grasp his opportunities. The other will reach out for bigger things. At the beginning he was not capable of any greater task than the fellow he started with. But each opportunity grasped gave him training and experience and fitted him for a bigger job. As he keeps on taking advantage of openings, he gets more and more fitted for big work, until finally the great chances come to him. He had no more ability than the fellow with whom he started even, but he developed his chances better.

What relation does this have to home town business? Just this, that the doors of opportunity are most likely to open to those who have many business friends. When you form pleasant business relations with people in your home town, you create a circle of people who are personally interested in you, who will throw things your way if they get a chance.

One of the best ways to get business friends, is to make it your practice to buy everything possible in your home community. That gives you a wide acquaintance in your home town, and develops a circle of people who would like to see you succeed. Some day some of those ambitious young fellows will have a chance to say some favorable word about you, which will open some door of opportunity so you can enter.

Some two miles down the road Harry found Abe standing between the horses, holding the runaway by his forelock. The latter was saddled and bridled, while the buggy went on ahead.

"That is a wonderful girl," said Harry, as he and Abe were riding along together. "She is very modest and gentle hearted."

"And as pleasant to look at as the flowery meadows," Abe answered. "I have promised to stop there a few minutes on our way back."

"It is possible Bim could get a divorce," said Abe, looking down thoughtfully at the mane of his horse. "I'll ask Stuart what he thinks about it when I see him again."

"I hope you'll see him soon."

"As soon as I can get to Springfield."

Next day a letter came from Doctor Allen, telling him that Ann was far gone with a dangerous fever. Both Abe and Harry dropped their work and went home. Ann was too sick to see her lover.

The little village was very quiet those hot summer days. The sorrow of the pretty maiden had touched the hearts of the simple kindly folk who lived there. For a year or more there had been a tender note in their voices when they spoke of Ann. They had learned with great gladness of her engagement to marry Abe. The whole community were as one family with its favorite daughter about to be crowned with good fortune, greater than she knew. Now that she was stricken down, their feeling was more than sympathy. The love of justice, the desire to see a great wrong righted, in a measure, was in their hearts when they sought news of the little sufferer at the tavern.

There was no shouting in the street, no story-telling in the doorways, no jesting in the stores and houses, no merry parties, gladdened by the notes of the violin, in the days and nights of Ann's long illness.

Samson writes in his diary that Abe went about like a man in a dream, with no heart for work or study. He spent much time at the doctor's office, feeling for some straw of hope.

One day late in August, as he stood talking with Samson Traylor in the street, Doctor Allen called him from his doorstep. Abe turned very pale as he obeyed the summons.

"I've just come from her bedside," said Doctor Allen. "She wants to see you. I've talked it over with her parents, and we've decided to let you and her have a little visit together. You must be prepared for a great change in Ann. There's not much left of the poor girl. A breath would blow her away. But she wants to see you. It may be better than medicine. Who knows?"

The two men went across to the tavern. Mrs. Rutledge and Abe tipped up the stairway. The latter entered the room of the sick girl. The woman closed the door. Ann Rutledge was alone with her lover. There were none who knew what happened in that solemn hour save the two—one of whom was on the edge of eternity, and the other was never to speak of it. The only record of that hour is to be found in the face and spirit of a great man.

Years later Samson wrote in a letter:

"I saw Abe when he came out of the tavern that day. He was not the Abe we had all known. He was different. There were new lines in his face. It was sorrowful. His steps were slow. He had passed out of his young manhood. When I spoke to him, he answered with that gentle dignity now so familiar to all who knew him. From that hour he was Abraham Lincoln."

Ann passed away before the month ended and became, like many of her kind, an imperishable memory. In her presence the spirit of the young man had received such a baptism that henceforward, taking thought of her, he was to love purity and all cleanliness, and no Mary who came to his feet with tears and ointment was ever to be turned away.

CHAPTER XVI

Wherein Young Mr. Lincoln Safely Passes Two Great Danger Points and Turns into the Highway of His Manhood.

For days thereafter the people of New Salem were sorely troubled. Abe Lincoln, the ready helper in time of need, the wise counselor, the friend of all—"old and young, dogs and horses," as Samson was wont to say—the pride and hope of the little cabin village, was breaking down under his grief. He seemed to care no more for work or study or friendship. He wandered out in the woods and upon the prairies alone. Many feared that he would lose his reason.

There was a wise and merry-hearted man who lived a mile or so from the village. His name was Bowlin Green. Those days when one of middle age had established himself in the affections of a community, its members had a way of adopting him. So Mr. Green had been adopted into many families from Beardstown to Springfield. He was everybody's "Uncle Bowlin." He had a most unusual circumference and the strength to carry it. His ruddy cheeks and curling locks and kindly dark eyes and large head were details of importance. Under all were a heart with the love of men, a mind of unusual understanding and a hand skilled in all the arts of the Kentucky pioneer. He could grill a venison steak and roast a grouse and broil a chicken in a way which had filled the countryside with fond recollections of his hospitality; he could kindle a fire with a bow and string, a pine stick and some shavings; he could make anything from a splint broom to a rocking horse with his jack-knife. Abe Lincoln was one of the many men who knew and loved him.

On a warm, bright afternoon early in September, Bowlin Green was going around the pasture to put his fence in repair, when he came upon young Mr. Lincoln. The latter sat in the shade of a tree on the hillside. He looked "terribly peaked," as Uncle Bowlin has said, in a letter.

"Why, Abe, where have you been?" he asked. "The whole village is scared. Samson Traylor was here last night lookin' for ye."

"I'm like a deer that's been hurt," said the young man. "I took to the woods. Wanted to be alone. You see, I had a lot of thinking to do—the kind of thinking that every man must do for himself. I've got the brush cleared away, at last, so I can see through. I had made up my mind to go down to your house for the night and was trying to decide whether I have energy enough to do it."

"Come on; it's only a short step," urged the big-hearted Bowlin.

Blouses Go to Many Lengths

THERE is not much that is new to report on the subject of styles in blouses, except that with the advance of summer the proportion of white blouses has grown larger and the public has developed a taste for those models that are higher in the neck at the back. Pale tints with white or cream lace for their decoration are naturally in demand in midsummer, but not to the exclusion of vivid colors by any means. Washable, tailored, cotton blouses in delft blue and in lavender and pink, with narrow elany or other edges used for bordering their collars and cuffs, provide a crisp neatness that is refreshing to look at in hot weather and are in demand for practical wear.

Georgette is still far in the lead among blouse materials. Beginning with the tie-on style which extends a little below the waist line at the front, blouses go to many lengths. Some have a six-inch frill below the waist, others are plain with a short peplum and very little definition of the waist line, like the blouse of pale pink georgette and white lace shown in the picture. Pin tucks and sprays of flowers embroidered in silk to match the fabric remain in the company of laces on these blouses. A peplum of this length, or longer, is often knife-plaited. Going to the extreme in length—about twelve inches—the peplum transforms the blouse into something like a small coat, and blouses of this character in high colors are very pretty for evening or other dressy wear.

Fine blouses of white voile, with drawn work, hem-stitching and a little simple hand embroidery, we have with us in greater force than ever. They were always beloved of genteel women whose taste runs in the direction of sheer, dainty materials and fine hand work. These blouses are lasting and launder to perfection. They look new as long as they last.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE PIGS.

"Hello, Porky," said Brother Bacon. "You know, Brother Bacon, you are getting to be very rude. You should call me grand-father, in a respectful tone."

"Oh all right," said Brother Bacon. "I'll call you grand-father when ever you wish me to. Sometimes you aren't so fussy about being called it, are you?"

"It depends on what else I have to think of," said Grandfather Porky Pig.

"What else do you ever have to think of besides food?" asked Brother Bacon in surprise.

"Ah, what indeed?" asked Miss Ham. "What indeed?" asked Mrs. Pink Pig.

"Squeal, squeal, what indeed?" asked Pinky Pig's mother.

"Grunt, grunt, whatever else do you have to think of besides food?" asked Master Pink Pig.

"Yes, pray tell us that, squeal, squeal," said Pinky Pig.

"You'd better tell us, we'd like to know," said Sammy Sausage.

"You're all getting much excited," said Grandfather Porky Pig.

"Well," he added, "I have other things to think about besides food. At least one other thing to think about besides food."

"And now that I say that, I remind myself of the fact that I have other things to think about besides food."

"He has two other things to think about besides food," said Brother Bacon. "What in the world can they be? How astonishing a piece of news is that."

"How very astonishing and surprising," said Miss Ham, "squeal, squeal, it is hard to understand what they might be."

"It is almost impossible to believe that Grandfather Porky Pig, has two other things to think about besides food," said Mrs. Pink Pig. "Grunt, grunt, I can scarcely believe it."

"Squeal, squeal, I can scarcely believe it either," said Pinky Pig's mother.

"I can scarcely believe it to be possible, grunt, grunt," said Master Pink Pig.

"I can scarcely believe it myself, grunt, grunt," said Pinky Pig.

"I would like to hear what two other things you have to think of besides food," said Sammy Sausage. "Yes, Grandfather Porky, I would be very glad to hear what they are."

"Oh, very well," said Grandfather Porky. "I will tell you."

"He is going to tell us, grunt, grunt," said Brother Bacon.

"He is going to tell us, squeal, squeal," said Miss Ham.

"He is going to tell us, grunt, grunt," said Mrs. Pink Pig.

"He is going to tell us, squeal, squeal," said Porky Pig's mother.

"He is going to tell us, grunt, grunt," said Master Pink Pig.

"He is going to tell us, squeal, squeal," said Pinky Pig.

"We are to hear," said Sammy Sausage. "grunt, we are to hear."

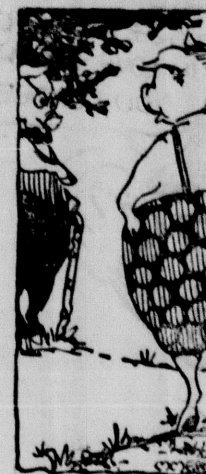

"Well, give me a chance to tell you then. You pigs all grunt and squeal so much I can't tell you anything. You take up all the time in grunting and squealing when I might be explaining myself."

"Yes, I have two other things to think about besides food," said Grandfather Porky Pig continued.

"One of them is the beautiful thought of back scratching and the other is the beautiful thought of delicious mud."

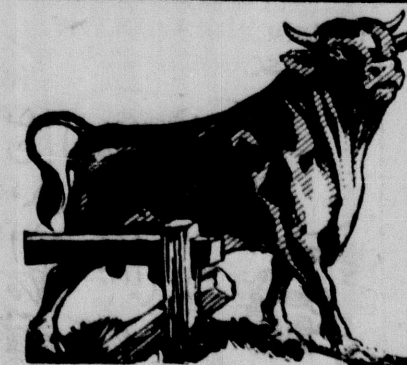

"So you see I have two other thoughts. Yes, and fine thoughts they are. But still the thing I think of mostly, I will admit, is food, beautiful, beautiful food!"

"The other thoughts are good ones and we're glad to hear them," said Brother Bacon, "but we're very glad that you think mostly of food. For if you didn't you'd be a very queer pig, a queer pig indeed!"

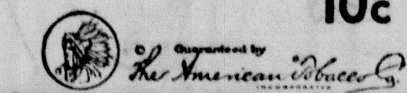

"IMPOSSIBLE TO BELIEVE."

than demonstrated its effectiveness in the spectacular fashion in which the victor traveled over the course.

By the victory a fourth race will be necessitated. Charles Eckert's speed boat, Romalda, of the Keystone Yacht Club, of Tacoma had two legs on the trophy prior to Saturday's race. Three victories gives permanent possession.

The race simmered down to a battle between Eckert's Romalda which was anxious to obtain her third successive triumph for the trophy, and Freitag's Freda II, defending the cup. The pilot of the Freda II was no other than Billy Freitag himself, the donor of the cup early this year. Wagner's Baby Nymph, also flying the Westville pennant, was the only other entry in the race, but was soon distanced by the pair of leading rivals.

Freitag's craft gained a slight margin in the early part of the grind around the four laps of the course in front of the clubhouse, and the Romalda was never able to make this up. The total distance was 17 1/2 nautical miles. The Freda II finished a quarter of a mile ahead of her rival, E. C. Headley, chairman of the committee, in charge did not announce the official times.

In the evening dancing was the chief pleasure and yachting proved a great source of attraction.

Miss Eunice Winterstein entertained the crowd with her performance on the aquaplane behind the speed boat "Sterling."

HABIT WAS STRONG ON HIM

Even Smith's Words of Wisdom Failed to Keep Jones' Attention From Wandering.

Smith and Jones were personal friends, so one day Smith took a personal friend's liberty and said to Jones:

"You mustn't take offense if I speak to you about something I have had on my mind for some time—just a little habit of yours."

"Nobody has ever had the nerve to tell you before," Smith continued in a hesitating sort of voice, "and you are such a splendid, noble fellow."

"Yes, yes," answered Jones.

Smith cleared his throat; then, with great determination, launched out:

"You're one of those fellows who never really know what is being said to them; you're always pursuing some train of thought. Any one can tell half the time you are not listening by the faraway look in your eyes. You've offended a lot of people. Of course, it's terribly rude, only you don't know it. You mustn't any more, old chap"—putting his hands on Jones' shoulders. "Promise me you'll not."

Jones was then obliged to face his friend.

"Just what were you saying?" he inquired in a faraway voice.

Is Your Hair Long?

The fact that a person was wrongly certified as insane led to a discussion the other day as to whether long hair was a sign of insanity, London Answers states.

It was said that, although this was no evidence of insanity, it might probably be proof of eccentricity. Many of our greatest geniuses have possessed remarkable crops of hair.

It was once said that the love of music, or the possession of musical talents, tended to increase the growth of hair, and, indeed, when one looks round there are many instances to make this seem feasible.

A great man once made a statement to the effect that there was only a thin dividing line between genius and lunacy. So if long hair is a sign of insanity and genius and there is only a thin dividing line between the two, it behooves us to be very careful how we treat long-haired, eccentric-looking individuals, for fear they prove to be some one too great to risk offending.

Tai Ping Rebellion 1850-1865.

What is known in history as the Tai Ping rebellion was an insurrection of a section of the Chinese which originated in 1850 and was not suppressed until 1865. The rebels were under the leadership of a man who declared that he was divinely commissioned by heaven to establish a universal peace, though his real object was to overthrow the Manchurian dynasty at Peking. This rebel chief, the Detroit News recalls, was named Hung Shutsun, who began life as a village schoolmaster. Branching out, he styled himself "the heavenly king" and his dynasty "Tai Ping" or "Great Peace."

For a time the insurrection was one of formidable dimensions, but the rebels were finally defeated, largely through the assistance of British troops, led by Gen. Charles G. Gordon (1838-1885), thereafter popularly known as "Chinese" Gordon.

In the opening game here yesterday, Hilldale playing as the "home" team, defeated the Madison Stars by the score of 11 to 4.

Rector's work in the box puzzled the Stars and his home run in the seventh scored Santop ahead of him. Johnson fielded his position in flashy form.

THEY WENT FISHING.

Two men took a trip into the woods to hunt and fish. During the trip one of them had the misfortune to lose his pocketbook and the other one lost his check book.

When they discovered their loss one of them laughed for he knew he could easily get another check book. But the other man did not laugh. He hurried back to the woods and spent many hours looking for his money.

If the checking system had no other value it would be well worth while from the standpoint of safety alone—but there are many other advantages, too. Nine times as much business is done each day with checks as is done with cash.

'ROUND THE SPORT CIRCLE

WITH JACK VEIOCK,
International News Sporting Editor.

JACK DEMPSEY may have fractured all high-powered, money-earning records for time elapsed in knocking out George Carpentier, but if reports regarding what Joe Lynch received for boxing Sammy Sandow last June are correct the West Side bantam takes the belt.

Dempsey, on the basis of $300,000 for his bit, earned something like $117.25 per second against Carpentier.

Lynch, who fought Sandow at the Boxing Dome in the Bronx earlier in the year, was reported to have taken down $10,000 for his end. As Sandow lasted just fifty-five seconds with Lynch, the bantam boxer was paid $181.81 per second for his efforts. Of this fifty-five seconds Sandow spent twenty-six taking counts, so Lynch really was at work only twenty-nine seconds at the rate of $344.83 per second. All of which is going some.

Speaking of records, this bird "Batting" Ghee made one for getting in and out of the spotlight at Atlantic City.

A change of uniform certainly works wonders with some baseball players. Trades and sales during the recent Winter caused many a player to swap uniforms when the big league races got under way last Spring, and not a few of them are playing better ball than ever before.

Rabbit Maranville is a vivid example. Maranville, of course, has long been a wonderful player, but he has seldom shone to better advantage than since he donned a Pittsburgh uniform.

By the same token Johnny Rawlings, who came to the Giants from Boston via the Phillies, has succeeded in filling a yawning gap on Mister McGraw's infield, and Jeff Pfeffer, who went to the Cards from Brooklyn, has little trouble finding himself.

The trade between Boston and Pittsburgh, by the way, was perhaps the most beneficial to both clubs of any that has been made in recent years. Southworth, Nicholson and Barbare have gone a long way toward rejuvenating the punching power of the Braves, and Maranville has certainly done much toward "making" the Pirates.

From recent peeps at the tennis news one comes to the conclusion that Tilden and Johnston will be able to settle the Japanese question if Kumagae and Shimidzu get into the final argument. "Itchy and Shimmy," apparently, will have an anxious time.

Jeff Smith, Jersey's erstwhile globe-trotting middleweight, feels the urge of the big coin again and steps forth to say that he would like to mingle with anybody from the best middleweights to the light heavies, which means Johnny Wilson, Mike or Tom Gibbons and Georges Carpentier. Jeff begs to recall to the minds of the fistic fans that he went twenty rounds with Carpentier in France and is the only man who was ever credited with a defeat of the late Les Darcy.

The lively ball no doubt has had much to do with the remarkable increase in long-distance hitting this season. It has certainly come as a hoodoo to some of our best little infielders as well. Sharp raps down to the infielders look more wicked from the press boxes than ever before, the ball often taking quick, crazy bounds that demand lightning-like speed and judgment on the part of the players guarding the inner circle if they succeed in trapping it. Yet neither the effect on hitting or fielding must be taken too seriously. The game would be devoid of most of its thrills if it was played well-nigh perfect.
